REASON FOR VISIT

This is an outpatient visit done at request of Dr. [REDACTED] for patient with abdominal wall hernia as well as anterior abdominal wall mass.

HISTORY

Mr. [REDACTED] is a 52-year-old gentleman who was found to have a tumor near the ileocecal valve leading to obstruction in [REDACTED]. Right hemicolectomy was performed. The specimen showed a 5-cm tumor with mucinous component, well differentiated. Tumor went through the muscularis propria into pericecal adipose tissue. There was lymphatic invasion as well as perineural invasion. Tumor was identified in 8 of the 13 pericolic lymph nodes.

The patient refused any adjuvant chemotherapy. He is being followed by Dr. [REDACTED]. The patient has been trying the naturopathic medicine to boost his immune system. This seemed to have stabilization of his disease. CT scans had been performed. The last one done on 03/02/2011.

This medical report is from a cancer surgeon with whom we have worked. The report describes a 52 year old male patient with cancerous tumors throughout the abdominal area. At the time the report was written this patient had been working with us using detoxification, nutritional therapy and homeopathic medicines for approximately 9 months. Prior to consulting with us the patient's health had become very compromised because of the cancer. He refused chemotherapy and radiation because other family members had undergone traditional medical cancer therapies and the results were not good.

At the time this patient consulted us for help his health was such that he was not considered to be a good surgical candidate, the doctors declined to perform surgery because of his overall poor health. His prognosis was very poor, not much hope was held out for him in traditional medical cancer care options.

After working with us for 9 months his health improved to the point where he successfully underwent surgery with good outcomes. His health problems were not over by any means, but enough improvement had been gained to allow him to have a successful surgery and with follow up care in our office he continued to improve over time.

Note the words of the surgeon in his report above:

"The patient refused any adjuvant chemotherapy. He is being followed by Dr. _____ [his traditional medical oncologist]. (This oncologist was extremely vocal in his negative opinions about natural and alternative medicine, despite this the patient responded well to our methods as the surgeon reports here.) The patient has been trying the naturopathic medicine to boost him immune system. This seemed to have stabilization of his disease."

If given a fair trial, natural and alternative medicine can sometimes make a significant difference in a person's health, even in extreme cases like aggressive cancer. If you or someone you care about is dealing with a serious health issue, it may be the time to seek a second opinion from a practitioner experienced in natural and alternative medicine.
